FOR NEW RED CROSS HOSPITAL

W. T. WARDWELL STARTS THE WORK WITH A $100,000 GIFT.

Site to Be Chosen Uptown—Part of the Work Will Be to Train Surgeons and Nurses—Other Trustees Had Given Enough to Assure a New Building.

The Red Cross Hospital is to have a building of its own, with the full equipment and staff of a city hospital. This announcement was made yesterday after it became known that William T. Wardwell and other philanthropists have made contributions sufficient to warrant the erection of such a building.

Mr. Wardwell, it was said yesterday, gave $100,000 of the amount subscribed.
The other contributors were nearly all members of the board of trustees, among them John Huyler and Alfred Manierre.
The hospital now occupies entirely inadequate quarters at 110 West Eighty-second street, where more than 5,000 cases have been treated. It is felt by the trustees that it is now time for the Red Cross Society to have at least one hospital all its own in this country where surgeons and nurses capable of carrying out the work of the Red Cross throughout the world can have active training and where the ideals of the Red Cross in caring for the poor and the helpless can be carried out.

Allen C. Wardwell, the son of the principal contributor and the secretary of the hospital trustees, said yesterday that it was true that his father had sent his personal check for $100,000 to the Red Cross Hospital Association's treasurer, Mr. Wardwell said further:

"A site will be selected in the upper part of New York for the purpose of erecting and equipping a building of proper capacity that will meet the demands that are constantly made upon it."
"It is conceded that our city has many and efficient hospitals and that the work and service given by them are of the highest possible character, but it is felt that in the establishment of our new Red Cross hospital it will be possible to give gratitously a service that has never been reached by any other hospital of a similar character.
We have been constantly experimenting as to the advisability of the administration of therapeutic agents, and those known to have been found injurious have been eliminated. The experiments in this direction by the present executive head of the Red Cross Hospital have been highly successful."
"My father has felt for a long time that the tremendous increase of population in the northern part of the city has made the hospitals there entirely inadequate to meet the demands upon them, and therefore felt justified in combining his regard for the Red Cross organization with his appreciation of the needs of that part of the city."

CUSTOMS INSPECTORS DINE.

Mr. Lavelle and Dr. Cadman Talk Patriotism and Give Good Advice.

The United States customs inspectors of the port got together at the Savoy last night for the second annual banquet. They heard from the Rev. S. Parkes Cadman what good fellows they really are—when off duty—they heard from Mr. Lavelle how to be good, and they had, officially, a good time.

The banquet hall was decorated with the customs flag, entwined with the national flag. On the guest table by way of decoration were plaster representations of the Brooklyn Bridge with a customs tug passing under it and of a pier with a customs tug in side. About 275 inspectors of all grades were present. Collector of the Port Strahan was kept away by his illness. Deputy W. O. Cloyes, in charge of the Barge Office, presided.

The Rev. S. Parkes Cadman remarked that he met the customs inspectors before, and could hardly believe that they could be so pleasant when off duty. "I've spent more sleepless hours over them—before landing than I ever did over the unpleasant sinners of my church," said Mr. Cadman.

He was down for a toast to the President.
He praised Mr. Roosevelt for the work he has done and the manner in which he has done it. As soon as he finished one Fourth of July period and the tumult and the shouting died, he landed hard on another.

Mr. Lavelle, after saying pleasant things concerning his own experiences with the customs officials and complimenting Collector of the Port Strahan, went on to speak of "The Luxury of Doing Good." Thomas F. Peters of Brooklyn, told them that a sensational press depends on sensational news, and that the newspapers will give him their money. F. E. Hamilton spoke on "Our Divisions."

Semi-Annual Sale of Ribbons Starts To-morrow.

This is a twice-yearly event with us—anxiously awaited by those who have ribbon wants to supply. There have been marked advances recently in the prices of raw silk, but every dollar's worth of ribbons in this sale have been marked previous to the price rise. In the open market to-day the identical kinds would cost from a third to a half more.

When the silk looms were dull and listless a few months ago, we placed large orders for ribbons. At the same time prices of raw silk were the lowest they had been in years. This means great ribbon economy to you.

Ribbons for every possible use are represented.
